Should parents feel guilty for saying no?

Parents often feel the desire to say 'yes', or to feel that they are doing the right thing by saying yes to their child when 'no' would have been more appropriate and even accepted by the child if the boundaries were already set.

Get a sense of your child's life at school by asking questions that elicit more than a one-word response. Try one of these conversation starters:

- Tell me about the best moment of your day?
- What was the hardest thing you had to do today?
- Did any of your classmates do anything funny?

What You will Do?

If your child came home from school and told you that their teacher threw a book on his/her face, how would you handle it?

- Would you instantly assume that they are telling the truth?
- Would you call or meet the principal and demand that the teacher be removed?
- Would you aggressively approach the teacher and make accusations?
- Would you call and request a meeting with the teacher to ask them calmly if they could explain what happened?
